Except

in one point of view, this is a matter of no interest to the world at large. Spanish ministers seldom represent either principles or a policy. The conflicte between river statesmen in that country are but too generally mere struggles for place while their result is decided by the caprice of the covereign more often than by anything else. 1 is, however, possible that a new Government might be willing to do that justice to the creditors of Spain against which M. Salaverra, the late Finance Minister, resolutely set his face. There eppears to be a growing conviction in the country. that financial dishenesty does not pay in the long run; and that Spain loads more by preventing the 140, Hongkong, 24th October, 1864. the development of her resources, than she gains L. It is more likely that this should be done by any minister than by M. Belverra, who was equally incapable of taking a broad or an honest view of the subject. The military news received from America doring the week is, apparently rather favourable to the Federals.
